

BIOGRAPHY

Elliott Klein started playing guitar at 16 years old after listening to classic guitar gods like Steve Vai, Tommy Emmanuel, and Eric Johnson. He was so dedicated to his instrument that he was able to attend Berklee College of Music just two years later. It was here that Elliott formed his first cover band that played over 100 shows up and down the east coast.

Upon graduating in 2010, with a double major in performance and business, Elliott moved to Brooklyn, NY, where he spent time working as a session guitarist and private guitar teacher. He had a few residencies as a trio group called The L train alongside Adam Neely and Shawn Crowder. He also played guitar in the Metropolitan Players and Hank Lane wedding cover bands. Elliott also played in NYMF and the New York International Fringe Festival, and at the cabaret venue 54 Below.

Elliott Klein has also written his own original music and formed the band, Bright & Loud. His last release in 2015 was an EP "In Hiding," that showcased his guitar playing, producing, and songwriting abilities. Bright and Loud had tracks up on HypeMachine, was reviewed by EmergingIndieBands.com and they played SXSW quite early into the band's formation.

After five years in Brooklyn, Elliott moved to Los Angeles, CA, where he currently resides. His first month in LA, he played guitar at NAMM for Mojotone, which he will continue this year. At just a year in the city, he has backed artists at popular shows like It's A School Night and HoneyPot, has a residency at Craft Hill with the Kate Brown Band (where he plays regular shows and hosts a jam night once a month, backing up to 20 artists in one night), worked session gigs for local artists and has recorded for We Found New Music. He also teaches guitar lessons both privately and through Reverblessons.com.

Elliott Klein is one of LA's more versatile performers and session musicians. He has worked with such artists as:

- Laura Bell Bundy
- Micky Blue
- Justina Maria Soto
- El Mar
- Party Lights
- Kate Brown Band
- Polaris Rose
- Amy Guess
- Claire London